Columbus City Schools: What's on the Schedule?

Sponsored by: SBC and DeVry University

Dr. Gene Harris, superintendent, Columbus Public Schools; Stephanie Hightower, president, Columbus Board of Education

Columbus Public Schools Superintendent, Dr. Gene Harris, is focused on the bottom line. "Academic achievement, increasing skills so that kids who graduate from Columbus Public Schools can go on to college, the military or good jobs." This Week Newspapers, August 12, 2004 New programs are in place to increase parental involvement, the new Virtual High School has received 72 applications and facilities are continually being built or renovated. Dr. Harris continues to face challenges; however, as she tries to emerge from state designated "academic watch" in addition to meeting new federal improvement goals. To meet these challenges, the Columbus Board of Education will ask voters to approve a 6.95-mil operating levy on November 2. Board President, Stephanie Hightower, will share with the audience how the district intends to spend the money and maintain accountability.

Celebrating 100 Years of Ireland's Abbey Theater

Presented in Partnership with: CAPA

Ben Barnes, artistic director, Abby Theater

Ireland's Abbey Theater, considered "the most famous theatre in the world," celebrates its 100th anniversary with a U. S. tour of J. M. Synge's sparkling comedic masterpiece Playboy of the Western World. The Abbey Theater was founded in 1904 for the purpose of putting on plays written and acted by Irish people. CMC, in partnership with CAPA, is pleased to welcome Ben Barnes, artistic director of the Abbey Theatre since 2000. This year, Barnes will direct The Playboy of the Western World for Abbeyonehundred in Ireland and throughout the United States. Barnes views 2004 as the beginning of a new chapter for the Abbey. "Change is the friend of progress and that facet of this organization must come under rigorous scrutiny and re-appraisal if the Abbey is to position itself to survive and thrive in a world, which in the words of our founder, W.B. Yeats, is "changed" and "changed utterly."

BalletMet: Balancing artistic acclaim with financial success

Gerard Charles, artistic director, BalletMet; Pam Bishop, development director, BalletMet; Sonia Welker, company dancer, BalletMet.

Moderated by: Ray Hanley, president, Greater Columbus Arts Council

We all agree that the Arts play an important role in any community.

There is the cultural value as well as the economic impact. Community arts organizations throughout the country are having to deal with the ever increasing pressure for national and international recognition while struggling with funding, declining attendance and increased competition.

Bishop

Charles

Welker

BalletMet has received broad critical acclaim for their recent performance at The Joyce Theater in New York City, but faces challenges at home with a declining facility and competition that includes The Rockettes for holiday entertainment dollars.

Please join us for a discussion about the challenge within our community arts organizations to balance artistic integrity with financial success and to find out how BalletMet intends to succeed at both!
