Special Report: New Lesson Plan for Education

Tough as it was to educate the district's 49,000 students and manage the state's largest school system it just got a whole lot tougher. New in the Superintendent's role in 2019, Dr. Talisa Dixon came with a strong plan to turn around the system's failing record. Her plan included bringing more order and consistency to the 116 schools, fair and efficient use of resources, and improving distance learning, among others. It did not include tackling these improvements amid a 100-year pandemic that emptied buildings sending kids home – ready or not.

A May 17, Columbus Dispatch Editorial noted: “The exact form that public schooling will take in the next school year isn't clear yet; even if students return to classrooms, it's likely to be in a limited format. The changes wrought by the coronavirus are as good a starting point as any for systemwide change. The needs – the opportunities — are clearer than ever. We hope the community is ready to respond.”

Just like K-12, higher ed faces its own challenges that have been exacerbated by the health crisis. Dr. Robert Gervasi leads Ohio Dominican University, a 1,600 student Catholic liberal arts institution on the city's northeastern corner. At the helm since 2017, Gervasi's extensive and diverse background includes his education in classics and ability to speak seven languages. What's ahead for small universities as they navigate a new normal may take all seven languages and more.

June 10 – CMC Opens to Limited Live Audience

We're excited to welcome an audience of 50 members to our forum on Wednesday, June 10 featuring Rich Cordray discussing his recently released book “Watchdog.” Livestreaming will continue complimentary on YouTube and NBC4i.

Registration with payment for live attendance is required by Friday, June 5. We cannot accept walk-ins.

We will require guests to wear face masks except during dining. Dining room numbers will be limited, with paper napkins, salads with individual dressings, a single plated meal, no bread service, or coffee and cookies following the forum. We will use disposable name badges.

We will adhere to this protocol strictly, so we thank you in advance for your cooperation to protect speakers, your fellow CMC members, staff, and yourself.

ers, your fellow CMC members, staff, and yourself.

Details could change as we implement these new procedures. Please visit the website to review guest protocol for attending.

The Boat House is also implementing significant safety and sanitation standards.

- Electronic thermometer readings of guests at entry
- All employees will wear facemasks, servers will wear gloves
- Signage to encourage physical distancing
- Multiple hand sanitation stations throughout the facility
- Installation of touchless faucets and soap dispensers in restrooms

A limited number of people will again enjoy this beautiful view of the city skyline from the Boat House on June 10 as they attend the CMC forum.

- All doors remain open whenever possible
- Opening and Closing machine (mist) sanitation
- Multiple-times-per-day sanitizing handles, doorknobs, public surfaces
- Extensive staff training in COVID-19 specifically, and “serve safe,” with mandatory adherence

– Calendar of Events –

When you become detached mentally from yourself and concentrate on helping people with their difficulties, you will be able to cope with your own more effectively. Somehow, the act of self-giving is a personal power-releasing factor.
